RI Business in FedEx Small Business Grant Contest

Michael Coyne, a graduate of the DD Council’s RI Self-Employment Business Incubator Project, is participating in the FedEx Small Business Grant Contest. This national contest is run annually by Federal Express to award twelve U.S.-based small businesses with grants up to $50,000.

Michael is the owner of both Red, White & Brew Coffeehouse and The Budding Violet, located at 601 Great Rd, North Smithfield. He is an amazing person and an active entrepreneur, and is involved as a peer mentor with the Self-Employment classes and a participant in the weekly Thursday afternoon Entrepreneur’s Forums. He is also involved with the new speaking program on Self-Employment as part of the RI Cross Disability Coalition’s Speakers Bureau.

Michael is one of 17 Rhode Island businesses who entered the contest. He is the only business owner who has a disability! The first cut of the contest involves voting by the general public and whoever gets in the top 100 votes nationally will make it to the second round of the contest.

Please assist Michael by sharing this information and voting for his business now and through March 24, 2021! To vote once, or daily through March 24th, and to see Red White & Brew Coffeehouse’s narrative entry and short video, click on http://bit.ly/38Gm7G4. Search Rhode Island then Red, White & Brew to vote.

Also thanks to the work of Deb Morais, the DD Council PR Director, a news story on Michael was posted in RI News Today. Check it out here.

This is such a great opportunity for Michael! If he becomes a finalist it will also be great publicity for Rhode Island, the Self-Employment initiative, and the collaboration among the DD Council, CPNRI, the RI Department of Labor and Training, and the Governor’s Workforce Board.

When you visit The Budding Violet and Red, White & Brew, you’ll enjoy delicious coffees and assorted pastries, as well as crafts and collectibles from local artisans!
New Behavioral Health Emergency Unit Opens at Roger Williams Medical Center

The new 9-bed Behavioral Health and Substance Abuse Emergency Treatment Unit at Roger Williams Medical Center’s Emergency Department is Rhode Island’s only fully private site for treatment of drug, alcohol, and psychiatric emergencies. The new unit is the second and final phase of the $15 million expansion and renovation of the Roger Williams Emergency Department.

The new unit is immediately adjacent to the Roger Williams Emergency Department and allows for direct access from the rescue unit bays of the Emergency Department when appropriate or for convenient transfer from the Emergency Department following medical stabilization when necessary. The new unit is a safe and secure space for the treatment of mental health and substance abuse emergencies and features private rooms with doors to respect the privacy of patients during the assessment, evaluation, and treatment.

During their stay at the new unit, patients are medically monitored by the unit’s behavioral health nurses and clinicians. The design of the unit includes reinforced glass walls in each room that allow for line-of-sight observation by clinical and security staff. Behavioral health clinicians are masters-level social workers and licensed mental health workers. The unit is far quieter than a busy emergency room which aids in the de-escalation of the behavior of patients in crisis.

BHDDH Director Kathryn Power praised the opening of the unit, saying, “It is gratifying to see this investment in behavioral health services, because we know it will result in greater access to care for individuals who need help and are seeking recovery. The new unit at Roger Williams Medical Center will help to fill a tremendous need, providing treatment and hope for Rhode Islanders with mental health and substance use conditions.”

Clinical evaluation of patients in the units includes a careful assessment of risk factors. Family members are consulted to obtain a history and contextual information, and community-based agencies where the patients have been treated are also consulted. Based on all of this a clinical plan of action is developed which may include admission to an inpatient behavioral health unit or to outpatient clinic care that is also available at nearby Fatima Hospital.

The new unit will provide a higher level of coordinated care than has been possible in the past and will also serve as a relief valve for other metro area hospitals as needed and as appropriate.

Letter Urges Biden to Address the Needs of People with Significant Communication Disabilities

CommunicationFIRST recently led a letter, signed by 47 additional organizations, urging the incoming Biden-Harris Administration to “take immediate and specific steps to safeguard and advance the human and civil rights of people with disabilities, especially individuals who have little to no understandable speech and rely on augmentative and alternative communication (AAC).”

CommunicationFIRST points out that “individuals who require AAC are often institutionalized, isolated, immunocompromised, and wrongly regarded as lacking in the capacity, need, or right to communicate and make decisions about their lives,” and that “the pandemic and racial disparities are threatening the health and lives of these persons in an unparalleled manner.” The letter describes nine steps the new Administration should pursue in its first six months.

1. Investigate and prevent health care discrimination against people with communication disabilities.
2. Assure the effective communication rights of children and adults with speech-related disabilities, especially in public health emergencies.
3. Clarify the ADA’s anti-discrimination, integration, and effective communication requirements for people with speech-related disabilities in all facets of life.
4. Guarantee equal educational access for students with significant expressive disabilities.
5. Ensure safe and equitable access to instruction during the pandemic.
7. Remove bureaucratic barriers under Medicare and Medicaid that deny people with disabilities access to the AAC they need to communicate.
8. Promote equitable access to AAC more broadly.
9. Improve and expand data gathering and analysis efforts, and encourage data-driven decision making.

Feds Propose Changes To Disability Employment Rules
by Michelle Diament | Disability Scoop

The Biden administration is reconsidering what should qualify as competitive integrated employment for people with disabilities.

The U.S. Department of Education said it plans to update a 2017 frequently asked questions document that serves as guidance for the vocational rehabilitation program and the agency is soliciting public comment [federalregister.gov] on its proposal [rsa.ed.gov].

Under federal law, people with disabilities participating in vocational rehabilitation must be given the opportunity to obtain competitive integrated employment. The guidance in question addresses what counts. The Education Department indicated that the update comes in response to requests for more clarification, particularly related to the location where work is conducted, and it represents the culmination of three years of meetings with stakeholders.

Per the new proposal, individuals with disabilities would have to earn at least minimum wage and work in the community in a setting where they interact with people without disabilities to the same extent that typically-developing employees do in order for work to qualify as competitive integrated employment. What’s more, employees with disabilities must have similar opportunities for advancement as employees without disabilities who have comparable positions.

Self-employment and telework opportunities can meet the criteria, the document indicates. And, group employment settings like janitorial and landscaping crews should be evaluated on a case-by-case basis.

However, the proposed guidance is clear that individuals with disabilities are not required to participate in competitive integrated employment and can choose to work in other settings.

“We encourage state VR agencies to continue to work with employers and other community partners to create employment opportunities that meet all criteria in the definition of ‘competitive integrated employment,’ including the criterion for an integrated employment location,” the document states. “Nevertheless, we recognize some VR program participants, represented by family members or others as appropriate, may choose to pursue work that does not meet the definition of ‘competitive integrated employment,’ such as those work opportunities that pay subminimum wage or are not integrated in a manner consistent with the definition.”

The Education Department is accepting comments on the guidance through April 8.
American Rescue Plan Act
Provisions Benefitting People with Disabilities

Stimulus Checks

The third round of economic stimulus checks are now being sent out – $1,400 for individuals with incomes up to $75,000, and $2,800 for couples earning up to $150,000. There will also be an additional $1,400 for each dependent claimed on tax returns.

In the two previous stimulus bills, only dependents under age 17 qualified for payments. This bill adds adult dependents, including adult children with disabilities and older parents with age-related disabilities who are claimed on someone else’s income tax returns. So a significant number of disabled people who didn’t qualify for previous stimulus checks will get this one.

Because this stimulus check is considered a rebate, it will NOT be counted against the asset limits faced by people with disabilities if spent within 12 months of receipt.

Home and Community-Based Services (HCBS)

People with disabilities have been hit hard by the COVID pandemic. As COVID swept through nursing facilities, psychiatric hospitals, and group homes for people with disabilities, it became very clear that isolating in one’s own home is safer than a congregate facility. However, many individuals with disabilities require direct hands-on services to help with bathing, eating, and moving around that make it difficult to isolate. These and other services that help people live and participate in their communities are known as Home and Community-Based Services (HCBS). Personal care aides and other direct service professionals who provide HCBS may work with multiple clients across various settings (including high risk settings such as nursing facilities), which can increase exposure risk to both the caregivers and their clients.

Despite the elevated risks, the first five federal COVID relief bills failed to provide targeted support that could help people with disabilities isolate safely and maintain access to the HCBS they need to keep living in the community.
The Act provides states with a 10% boost in federal Medicaid matching funds for HCBS through March 2021, which should infuse $12.67 billion in extra funding. States must reinvest the added federal funding to supplement their annual expenditures on supports and services for people with disabilities.

Additional Support for Behavioral Health Services

A second key change in the Act’s provision is that it includes a broad definition of what counts as HCBS. The definition includes service categories that are often used to cover community-based behavioral health services – like counseling, community support services, and assertive community treatment – that sometimes get left out of HCBS initiatives. These essential services for individuals with psychiatric disabilities and substance use disorder will receive a much-needed temporary boost to help people remain in the community. Several studies have shown not only that the pandemic has increased stress and the prevalence of behavioral health conditions, but also that it has decreased access to mental health and substance use disorder treatments.

States that want to add a longer term boost to their behavioral health treatment capacity can also take advantage of another Rescue Plan provision that provides an enhanced 85% federal matching rate for three years to fund mobile crisis team services trained in trauma-informed care and de-escalation strategies.

Other Provisions

The American Rescue Plan includes many other funding and emergency economic measures that aren’t designed just for people with disabilities, but will be of critical help to many people with disabilities. This includes:

- Continuing $300 per week unemployment payments through September 6, and making the first $10,200 “nontaxable” this year for households earning under $150,000.
- Increasing the Child Tax Credit to $3,000 per child this year for kids aged 6-17, and to $3,600 for kids under 6.
- Enhancing the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) for people without children. For workers without children, the Act raises the maximum EITC from roughly $540 to roughly $1,500 and raise the income limit to qualify from about $16,000 to at least $21,000. It also expands the age range of workers without children eligible for the tax credit to include younger adults aged 19-24 as well as people 65 and over.
- Funding for small businesses and also nonprofit organizations aimed at keeping workers employed and paid.
- Increasing funding for the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program, (LIHEAP), and for various food and nutrition funding, including Women, Infants, and Children, (WIC) and “Food Stamps,” the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, (SNAP).
- $25 billion more for emergency rental assistance.

PERSON-CENTERED THINKING
FACILITATOR TRAINING
Online Course
April 5—June 15, 2021
This free course is available to those supporting persons with I/DD living in R.I.
Register by March 30, 2021

Course Description:
Rhode Island is in the process of expanding and refining Person-Centered practices throughout the state. One of the most important components of Person-Centered Thinking is the facilitator who advises and assists the person to actively participate in developing a plan for all domains of their life.

This course focuses on the knowledge and skills a facilitator needs to help individuals to:
- Prepare for the plan
- Develop the plan
- Implement the Plan

To get the most from this course, it is recommended that learners identify an individual with whom they might engage in person-centered planning. The course will provide the opportunity to practice the skills and knowledge learned and to reflect on learner experiences.

Course Requirements:
Completion of the 11 online modules, assignments and participation in four (4) group sessions via Zoom is required to earn a certificate of completion.

Register online by March 30 using the link above. You will receive a confirmation by email when your registration is processed. Registration and course information is also available on the Sherlock Center website at www.sherlockcenter.org.

If you need a reasonable accommodation (e.g., ASL/CART) to participate in this course, please indicate your request on the registration form as soon as possible.

The Sherlock Center will use the email provided with your registration to create an account in Moodle and to provide course information and updates.

For registration questions, contact Elaine Sollecito at esollecito@ric.edu or Leave a message at 401-456-2764. Due to COVID-19 the Sherlock Center is open limited hours. Please allow extra time for staff to respond to messages.
A Matter of Balance
Managing Concerns About Falls

Many older adults experience concerns about falling and restrict their activities. A Matter of Balance was developed to address the fear of falling in older adults. This evidence-based program has been shown to reduce the fear of falling and increase activity levels.

This evidence-based program has been adapted to a virtual format, so participants can join online from the safety of their own home.
